SUBTERRANEAN FIGURE explores our human tendency to find reflections of ourselves in the natural world. Though this sculpture is a faithful replication of a particular piece of ginger, the scale and material shifts the context so the work resonates with the viewer as an abstract form with a figurative presence.

Will Vannerson is a metal sculptor and public artist in Kansas City, Missouri. His studio practice is characterized by the cultivation of incrementally developing, biomorphic forms—slow sculpture that brings to sheet metal an affinity for softness and for growing things. He has been awarded residencies nationally and internationally, was a guest artist at an international sculpture symposium in China in 2019, and is currently showing his outdoor works in cities across the United States.
