How did the travel apply to the job?

Professional development, continuing education and networking with regional building code professionals.

How training added value to the City

Attended training on building plan review, disaster damage assessment (such as floods or tornados), and State and Local partnership (illegal dumping). Awarded travel "Scholarship" in amount up to $800, plus payment of registration fees (up to $600), for attendance of ICC national education conference and code hearings. Award is dependent on consistent attendance of HOA annual education conferences. Travel scholarship funds assist the City in having a voice on the national level in the building codes development processes.

		Registrations	$150.00
		Total	$991.55

How did the travel apply to the job?

I supervise the Crime Analysis Unit which submits data to the 30 agency Benchmark Cities group. The conference discussed how data is collected and assembled as it is extremely important to do so consistently as we make public comparisons to our peer cities.

How training added value to the City

Because the city services we provide are publicly compared in the Benchmark Cities national publication, it is very important we are collecting and presenting data accurately and in the same fashion as other cities involved. These publications are used in a variety of ways including measurement of livability and other points which can impact economic development, growth and image of the City of Lawrence and its' city services.
